

Everyone gains at SOCAP fall fundraiser for College

Going...going...gone!

A first-class, seven-day cruise on the Royal Caribbean Cruise Line.

Dinner with President and Mrs. Lee.

A weekend for six at Ocean City.

These were a few of the items that went to bidders at the Gallaudet benefit auction Nov. 14, sponsored by the Washington, D.C. Society of Consumer Affairs Professionals (SOCAP).

Gone, also, were communication barriers as deaf auctioneers, business people and community members worked side-by-side with their hearing counterparts to make the auction a sell-out. Don Pettingill of the Development Office and College Relations doubled as auctioneer and master of ceremonies. Bernard Bragg, noted deaf actor, playwright and Gallaudet artist-in-residence, assisted Pettingill as auctioneer. Interpreters stood on the platform and mingled with the crowd to facilitate communication.

According to Pettingill, the auction was a tremendous success not only in raising more than $15,000 for the College but also in providing a unique opportunity for the deaf and hearing communities to work together for a philanthropic cause.

"I call it getting our 'act' together—attitudes, communication and teamwork," said Pettingill. "The auction was a perfect example of the success that can be accomplished through this kind of cooperation."

In thanking all those who made the auction successful, Lou Markwith, vice president for College Relations, said, "Gallaudet has a friend in SOCAP. The communication and understanding that developed between the two institutions will continue to benefit the College and the deaf community."

Among donated items, services and entertainment events sold to more than 200 participants were cameras, TDDs, art objects, gift certificates, beauty treatments, celebrity luncheons, housewares, luggage, dinners at various restaurants and a great number and variety of other practical and luxury articles.

Eastfield College's North Building will house the new Gallaudet regional center.

Eastfield College in Texas selected for Gallaudet's fifth regional center

The fifth Gallaudet Regional Center will open next February at Eastfield College in Mesquite, Tex., serving Texas, Louisiana, New Mexico, Utah and Colorado.

Eastfield College, one of the seven colleges within the Dallas County Community College District, is the only school in the area that offers a program in "Training Paraprofessionals for the Deaf."

Announcing the selection of Eastfield College as the newest regional center,

President Jerry C. Lee said, "A major emphasis at Eastfield is its continuing education program, with between 15,000 and 20,000 persons enrolled in credit and noncredit classes. The emphasis of Gallaudet's regional centers is also adult education. Together, Eastfield and Gallaudet will be able to provide a cost-effective way for hearing impaired people and deafness-related professionals to obtain the training they need within their own region."

Gallaudet graduates Phyllis Frelich and Ed Waterstreet star in the upcoming NBC drama.

Gally grads to star in NBC film 'Love is Never Silent'

Two Gallaudet graduates will star in a Hallmark Hall of Fame closed-captioned presentation, "Love is Never Silent," on NBC's Monday Night at the Movies on Dec. 9 from 9-11 p.m. The film, the first to feature three deaf actors in lead roles, also features more than 40 walk-on parts portrayed by hearing impaired actors.

Phyllis Frelich and Ed Waterstreet will portray the deaf parents of a hearing daughter, played by Mare Winningham, during the 1940s. The story, adapted from Joanne Greenberg's 1970 best-selling novel "In This Sign," revolves around the daughter's position as her parents' only link to the hearing world.

When Margaret, the daughter, falls in love and marries, the consequences threaten both her marriage to William, played by Frederic Lehne, and her relationship with her parents.

Also appearing will be Sid Ceasar as a pawnshop owner and Cloris Leachman as Margaret's mother-in-law.

Julianne Fjeld, a deaf woman brought up in a hearing family, is the co-executive producer of the presentation. Fjeld, who like Frelich and Waterstreet is a veteran of the National Theatre of the Deaf, also appears in the movie as a factory worker who meets with an accident due to the demands of her work.

Fjeld met author Greenberg 10 years ago and was so impressed with her book that she bought the rights and tried to get the project filmed. Although the book was hailed by reviewers, Fjeld met with difficulty in attracting the interest of the entertainment industry.

"It was called 'too artsy' and 'not commercial enough,'" said Fjeld, "but I knew that it was commercial." Then, four years ago, Fjeld met producer Marian Rees, who took on the project. The movie, a Marian Rees Associates Production, was filmed on location in Vancouver, British Columbia.

Frelich, who received a Tony Award for her performance in "Children of a Lesser God," said she cried when she read the strong dramatic sequences in the script for "Love is Never Silent."

"The film takes place in the late 1930s through the 1940s, and things were different for the deaf then," she said. "It was a limited world and they kept to themselves. As we show in the film, hearing impaired people were reluctant to 'sign' in public because there seemed to be such a negative aura attached to being deaf. One was isolated then."

"That feeling of isolation is what made me cry for Janice [the mother]," Frelich continued. "She wasn't really out there in the community—all she had was her family. When anything threatened her family group, she was devastated. It was the scenes of family turmoil and hurt that really got to me

Neighbors of the College view "Gallaudet: A Legacy and a Promise" at the Visitors Center.

Gallaudet's neighbors tour campus, discover what College is all about

Approximately 65 of Gallaudet's neighbors from Northeast Washington, D.C. toured the Kendall Green campus recently at the invitation of the Gallaudet Community Relations Council (GCRC).

Council members said that the purpose of the tour was to bring new people from the community to Gallaudet to build a better understanding between the College and the people in the neighborhood surrounding it. "That's what we're all about!" said GCRC secretary Hudie Fleming, who manages the Hechinger store in the nearby Hechinger Mall.

The GCRC is an organization comprised of residents and business people from the community near Kendall Green plus College staff, faculty and students.

Daisy Powell, the GCRC member representing the Northeast Neighborhood House, said that the people she spoke to were "just so glad they were invited to come."

"People saw that old clock tower but had no idea all this was back here," Powell declared. "I told them there was a lot more besides what they saw!"

A Gallaudet van picked up some of the GCRC guests from such places as the Capitol Hill Towers, an apartment house for senior citizens, while others arrived by car or public transportation or on foot. Two buses full of guests went to the Visitors Center; the Edward Miner Gallaudet Residence, where they were surprised with some refreshments and were greeted by Joan and Zan Lee; Chapel Hall; Kendall School; and the cafeteria, where they had lunch.

LaVarne Hines, director of Administrative and Community Services and an ex officio member of the GCRC, said that people really seemed enthusiastic about the 10 a.m. tour, some arriving as early as 9 a.m. all set to get underway.

Other GCRC events planned for this academic year include the benefit basketball game on Feb. 1 and the 6th annual Awards and Recognition Program scheduled for March 29.

The GCRC also sponsors a sign language class at the 5th District Police Headquarters, attended not only by police but also by staff from Riggs Bank, Safeway, Madison Bank, National Bank of Washington and American Security Bank, among others. Starting in January, the GCRC will also sponsor a sign language class at Hamilton Junior High School, which is adjacent to the Gallaudet campus.

Gallaudet Day events honor 198th birthday

Gallaudet Day, the annual observance of the birthday of Thomas H. Gallaudet, is Tuesday, Dec. 10. Several activities are scheduled in celebration of the event, including a program in Elstad Auditorium from 1-2 p.m.

Students Raymond Baeth and Topsy Toner will perform skits in honor of Thomas Gallaudet, and Martha Coulter will sign a poem for the occasion. Celebrants will parade to the statue of the College's "friend, teacher and benefactor," where Doris Wilding, president of the Student Body Government, and Kirk Anderson, senior class president, will place a wreath. Merv Garretson, special assistant to the president, will give closing remarks. A reception will be held after the program.

Class schedules will be revised so that students can attend the program.

Thomas Hopkins Gallaudet was born Dec. 10, 1787 in Philadelphia, Pa.

emotionally. These scenes were so well written, directed and acted that one doesn't have to be deaf to be affected by them—just being a mother will do."

Waterstreet, the only deaf child in his family, said, "Making this film has been a wonderful experience for me. I can bring my own emotions to the role of Abel [the father]—I can express the way a deaf person feels."

"I think this film will have a tremendous impact," he continued. "It's about communication. Understanding each other. It's about the love that exists in a family and the understanding that is finally achieved."

Waterstreet is the only deaf director in the United States to work with both hearing and hearing impaired theater companies. He has appeared in several television productions including "The Silken Tent" with Jason Robards and "A Child's Christmas in Wales" with Michael Redgrave.

When Joanne Greenberg's book "In This Sign" was first published in 1970, the reviews were laudatory and sales were high, but the subject matter met with a great deal of controversy.

"The book was inspired by my husband's social rehabilitation work with deaf people," said Greenberg.

"Through him I took a class in signing and made friendships with deaf people. Perhaps my greatest inspiration for the book was the moment I saw an older deaf man finally master the art of signing and communicate with his children."

"Signing wasn't done very much in public in 1970," Greenberg continued. "It was somehow shameful and secret. Signing was regarded in some quarters as something obscene and almost sexual, something to be kept in the closet. It wasn't something one wrote about, and this was the attitude taken by some hearing people."

"The strangest reaction came from some members of the deaf community," Greenberg added. "They felt as though their privacy had been invaded. They felt that the book should have been written by a deaf person. There were these kinds of objections from deaf people who hadn't even read the book. A parallel might be a non-Jew writing about Jews, or a non-Black writing about Blacks."

The New York Times described the novel as "a miracle of empathy. . . . Greenberg has taken the world of the deaf and made it an extension of everyone's experience." The Library Journal called it "a haunting book. . . . unforgettably vivid."

Emmy Award-winner Joseph Sargent ("The Marcus Nelson Murders") directed the teleplay by Darlene Craviotto.

Deaf Heritage Week activities slated

"Deaf Heritage Week" will be observed at seven metropolitan Washington public libraries Dec. 1-7. The week's events will focus on the history of elementary and secondary education of deaf people. Special tribute will be paid to Laurent Clerc, the first deaf teacher in the U.S. and the cofounder of the American School for the Deaf in Hartford, whose birthday bicentennial is December 26.

A highlight of the celebration will be a program, "Tributes to Laurent Clerc" held at five locations Dec. 4 at 7:30 p.m. Among members of the Gallaudet community who will give presentations are Mervin Garrettson, special assistant to the president, and Jack Gannon, executive director of Alumni Relations and Advancement, at the Wheaton Regional Library; Gilbert Eastman of the Department of Theatre Arts, at the New Carrollton Branch Library; Leon Auerbach and Francis Higgins, professors emeritus, at the Arlington County Public Library; and Fred R. Mangrubang, Department of Mathematics, at the Sterling Public Library.

A program scheduled Dec. 4 at the Martin Luther King Memorial Library will include presentations by KDES faculty members Pauline Spanbauer, Nathie Marbury, Sharon Kay Wood and teacher's aide Ruth Reed. Wood will render poetry in American Sign Language by deaf poets Stephen Kazier and Golladay Stephens.

The program at the Martin Luther King Memorial Library also includes a graphic arts exhibit by deaf artist Paul M. Setzer of the Gallaudet Art Department. A videotape about Clerc's arrival in America with Thomas Hopkins Gallaudet will run Dec. 2-6. The videotape is translated into American Sign Language by Eastman.

Alice Hagemeyer, D.C.'s librarian for the deaf community and originator of "Deaf Heritage Week," said, "The program stimulates us to celebrate the total heritage of deaf people, many of whom had deaf teachers who contributed greatly to their success as adults."

The Laurent Clerc Bicentennial Celebration exhibit now on display at the Merrill Learning Center will end Dec. 18. Iron-on decals commemorating Clerc are available at Alumni House ("Ole Jim").

Dec. 2 issue omitted

There will be no On the Green Dec. 2 because of the Thanksgiving break. The deadline for submission of articles for the Dec. 9 edition is noon Monday, Dec. 2. In the meantime may you have a wonderful (and thankful, of course) 4-day weekend!

Gallaudet College is an equal opportunity employer/education institution. Programs and services offered by Gallaudet College receive substantial financial support from the U.S. Department of Education.

Eastfield hosts center

Becoming a Gallaudet Regional Center, Eastfield College joins Johnson County Community College in Kansas, Northern Essex Community College in Massachusetts, Ohlone College in California and Flagler College in Florida.

"I share in the excitement of Eastfield's staff about the college's having been selected for the home of Gallaudet's southwestern site," said Eleanor Ott, president of Eastfield College. "The fine reputation Gallaudet enjoys brings an especially positive note to the collaboration. We are proud of Eastfield's long service to the deaf community and we see the new center as the perfect way to enhance that service."

According to the U.S. Bureau of Census, more than 91 percent of the nation's growth from 1980 to 1981 occurred in the South and West, leading to increased requests from school officials in those areas for Gallaudet to share its knowledge, research and resources.

Roslyn Rosen, dean of the College of Continuing Education will serve as administrator of the Eastfield regional center. A national search for a director of the regional center is now being conducted. Applications for the position of director can be sent to the Office of the President of Eastfield College. For more information, call Dr. Rosen x5599.

Announcements

The Student Union division of Student Affairs will sponsor a Holiday Crafts Fair on Gallaudet Day, Dec. 10, from 4-9 p.m. in the atrium of Ely Center. Members of the Gallaudet community will exhibit and sell seasonal crafts. Various students organizations will sell refreshments. For more information, call the Student Union, x5182 (V/TDD).

A reminder: Open season for health benefits enrollment ends Dec. 6. All regular employees can change health insurance plans or options, switch from a "self only" enrollment to a "self and family" enrollment or sign up for a plan for the first time without restrictions until that date.

The Washington Chapter of the Orissa Society of Americas is sponsoring a performance of Indian classical dance in the Ely Center auditorium on Sunday, Dec. 8 from 5-7 p.m. Performing for the first time in North America will be the Odissi dance group. Donations for the performance are $3 for students and senior citizens, $5 for others. For more information, call Pratap Das, x5160 (V/TDD).

"La Cage aux Folles," based on the book by Harvey Fierstein, will be presented in an interpreted performance on Jan 6 (rescheduled from Jan. 12) at the National Theatre, 1321 Pennsylvania Ave. NW. "La Cage," winner of six Tony Awards including best musical, is based on the play by Jean Poiret and features the music of Jerry Herman. Peter Marshall and Keene Curtis star. Tickets are $35 each and are available through the PACE office, x5597.

MSSD girls' volleyball team, others make fall athletic program a winner

The MSSD fall athletic program was productive and successful, led by the outstanding performance of the girls' volleyball team. The team smashed the school's 1983 record of 27 wins and 9 losses with a 41-1 record this season. They also took first place in four major tournaments.

Led by seniors Amy Hile and Phyllis Brooks, the volleyball team captured the University of Maryland Great Pumpkin Tournament, the Model School Invitational, the Eastern Schools for the Deaf Tournament and the Potomac Valley Athletic Conference (PVAC) Tournament. Hile, Brooks and Bridget Tate were named to all-tournament teams in the Eastern Schools and Potomac Valley tournaments, and Kelly Coxen was named to all-tournament at the Eastern Schools tournament. Hile was selected as most valuable player in the PVAC.

Head football coach Rich Pelletier led his Eagles to a 6-3 season in his first year as head coach. The Eagles finished second in the Tri-State Athletic Conference, and Pelletier was named the conference's coach of the year. Eleven football players were selected as members of Tri-State Athletic Conference teams. All-conference first team members from MSSD are Todd Greene, offensive guard; John Werner, quarterback; Greg McConville, split end; and Cornelius Barr, kicker.

The MSSD junior varsity football team finished 0-4-2. Although winless, the young Eagles played hard football and progressed rapidly toward season's end.

Soccer fans were delighted as first-year coach Dale Ford and assistant Randy Prezioso turned around a 0-14 record in 1984 to a respectable 5-8 season this fall. Among the first victories was an impressive "first ever" defeat of the Marie Katzenbach School for the Deaf in New Jersey, and the defeat of the Queen Anne's School in Largo, Md., always a top team in the PVAC. Senior Orlando Serrano was a second-team all-conference selection as he finished his fourth year of varsity soccer.

The cross country team completed its finest season since the program began four years ago. In the PVAC championship meet, the MSSD boys finished third. Led by junior Mike Newton, the team gave its best performance ever. Newton's time of 16:24 for the 5,000 meters (3.1 miles) earned him all-conference honors for the second straight year.

Genevieve Scott, far left, and Leland and Lucille May were among members of the College's gift societies honored by President and Mrs. Jerry C. Lee at a reception and dinner Nov. 15.

Paychecks to be ready on Dec. 24

The last pay date in calendar year 1985 is Dec. 31. Because the College will be closed for the winter break from Dec. 25 through Jan. 1, the Controller's Office has adjusted its schedules to ensure completion of the Dec. 31 payroll prior to the winter break. This adjustment negates information in last week's On the Green.

Although the paychecks will not be payable until Dec. 31, they will be available for pickup at the regular distribution points on Tuesday, Dec. 24 until noon. If you plan not to be on campus that day, you may request that your check be mailed to your home.

Forms for this mailing service will be enclosed with the Dec. 17 paychecks and will also be available at the Cashier's Office, B-11, in College Hall. Employees who use direct deposit will not be affected by the winter break closing.

As announced last week in On the Green, as of Jan. 1 of Social Security rate will increase from 7.05 percent to 7.15 percent and the wage ceiling on which the charge is made will rise from $39,600 to $42,000. Not announced last week is the fact that, for those employees covered by Civil Service Retirement there will be a similar increase in the Medicare charge. The rate will increase from 1.35 to 1.45 percent, and the taxable ceiling will rise to $42,000. These changes will cause a slight decrease in net pay for all employees.

Among Ourselves

In a report in the Nov. 11 issue of On the Green about "A Kaleidoscope of Deafness" conference held in New York City in October, Simon Carmel's name was inadvertently omitted as one of the Gallaudet participants. Carmel is a faculty member in the Department of Sociology.

Wilbur Shope of the Transportation Department was honored at a reception Nov. 12 in recognition of his retirement after 22 years of service to Gallaudet.

Barbara Williams and Betsy Kipila of the Cued Speech Office of the Department of Audiology have participated in a variety of programs, seminars and conferences on Cued Speech in recent weeks in Boston, Mass.; Portland, Freeport and Waterville, Maine; Tidewater, Va.; and Dover, Del.

Barbara Pomeroy of the Physical Education and Recreation Department presented a workshop on "Experiential Education and Deafness" at the Association of Experiential Educational National Conference in Estes Park, Colo. Oct. 17-20.

You and Your Job

Your Retirement Program Part 2 of 5-part Series

This series describes retirement benefits for regular-status employees hired prior to January 1, 1984 and contributing solely to the Civil Service Retirement System. Future articles will address changes in the retirement program for employees hired on or since January 1, 1984.

Types of Annuities

There are three types of annuities:

- Annuity with survivor benefit to widow or widower;
- Annuity without survivor benefit;
- Annuity with survivor benefit to named person having an insurable interest.

An employee can choose which type of annuity he or she wants; however, a married employee is automatically granted the annuity with survivor benefit unless he or she requests, in writing, an annuity without survivor benefit. The type of annuity elected has no effect on children's eligibility for annuity.

An annuity with survivor benefit consists of a reduced annuity to the retiring employee and a survivor annuity to the wife or husband to whom the employee was married at the time of death. The survivor benefit is paid beginning the day after the retired employee dies and continues until the end of the month before the one in which the survivor remarries before age 60 or dies.

The retiring employee may choose all or any portion of his or her annuity as a base for figuring the amount of the survivor's benefit. The widow or widower will normally receive 55 percent of the amount which the employee chooses as a base. The retired employee's annuity is reduced depending on how much is chosen as the base for the survivor annuity.

An annuity without survivor benefit is paid to the retiring employee only during his or her lifetime.

In an annuity with survivor benefit to named person having an insurable interest, the retiring unmarried employee can take a reduction in annuity and can name a person for survivor benefit who has a reasonable expectation to receive some kind of financial benefit from the continuance of the life of the retiring employee. Generally, only a near relative might have this kind of insurable interest. If a person other than a near relative is named, proof of insurable interest may be required.

Readers respond to recent article on campus-wide TDD use, problems

In the Oct. 28 On the Green article about TDD use on campus, comments and suggestions were invited from the campus community.

Among the responses received to date are suggestions that (1) campus personnel stop referring to TTYs when they mean TDDs, and (2) TDD callers consider using a simple means to alert hearing people that a call is TDD.

There are few teletypewriters (TTYs) on campus these days with the increasing use of the more compact telecommunication devices for the deaf (TDDs). There is a growing trend these days (including in On the Green) to refer to TDDs only, not because TTYs no longer exist but because TTYs can be considered one of the TDD "devices."

References to TTYs are now commonly restricted to cases where a person wants to make clear that he or she is referring to one of the old teletypewriters, not one of the new-fangled jobs.

The second suggestion involves how to deal with a not uncommon problem: A hearing person, not fully acquainted with TDDs, answers the phone with several voiced "hellos" and then hangs up when the line appears dead.

Gil Delgado, the College's international development officer, said he has witnessed this problem on several occasions, and he suggests the following: that the TDD caller hit the space bar a few times, providing an audible signal on the line and thereby alerting the call receiver that it's a TDD call, not a dead line.

Share your talent: Teach for PACE

Do you know how to tie flies? Have you been stargazing for years? Is bar-hopping a special talent of yours?

PACE wants you.

PACE—Programs in Adult and Community Education—is looking for people with hobbies, talents, or knowledge they'd like to share with others as PACE teachers.

According to Boris Bogatz, director of PACE, topics for classes for the spring session are limited only by potential teachers' imaginations. The classes can be academic or playful, serious or lighthearted. The class length, structure and size are also up to the teacher, said Dr. Bogatz, who added that PACE is particularly interested in any kind of course that could be combined with a weekend retreat.

Instructors can teach for free or for a salary from PACE, negotiated individually and based on the course content, the number of students and other considerations. PACE courses are aimed primarily at, but not limited to, hearing impaired people. All members of the Gallaudet community are encouraged to contact PACE with ideas for classes.

Those interested in teaching should call the PACE office, x5597, or stop by to talk about ideas. Because the PACE spring semester catalog is currently being drawn up, potential teachers should submit suggestions for classes by mid-December.
